                  <cite>Iron Man (2008)</cite>, directed by Jon Favreau, marked the beginning of the Marvel Cinematic Universe. The film follows Tony Stark, a wealthy industrialist and genius inventor, who is captured by terrorists. While in captivity, he creates a powerful suit of armor to escape and later refines it to become the superhero Iron Man. Portrayed by Robert Downey Jr., Tony Stark is known for his witty personality and remarkable transformation from a self-centered arms dealer to a responsible hero. The film was praised for its action sequences, storytelling, and performance, making Iron Man a cultural icon.
